BETTER SAFE THAN SORRY: After being tranquillized, Mortimer the Moose is lifted into a trailer by Ministry of Natural Resources staff who then transported him safely to his new home at Haliburton Forest. The docile beast's health is being monitored. It's believed he has brain worm.

The MNR moves Mortimer to safer home

PETER DOWNS

Mortimer the moose has a new home.

The mystifying young male moose who behaves more like a friendly pet than a wild animal was captured Wednesday by the Ministry of Natural Resources and relocated to an enclosure at Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve.

MNR biologists suspect the yearling moose, known largely by his fans as Mortimer, is infected with a brain parasite that's almost always fatal. They plan to monitor his health at his new living quarters and release him, if his condition improves.

"It's going to be a wait and see situation," said the MNR's Dana Kinsman, who co-ordinated Mortimer's move. "... The objective is to rehabilitate him and return him to the wild when it's possible."

Mortimer began capturing the hearts of Highlanders with his peculiar behaviour and friendly nature early in the summer when he showed up at the bottom of Outlet Bay and decided not to leave.

Just a couple of weeks ago he wandered over to nearby Spruce Lake where he continued to impress people with his amiable personality.

Not only did he not shy away from humans, but he actually seemed to seek out their company.

The MNR's Minden office was flooded with phone calls from people who wanted the ministry to do something to protect the moose from being

The weather didn't make it the best day on which to hold a one-day strike, but local high school teachers say it was still an effective opportunity to get their message across.

"It's been pretty quiet," Laura Willis, the local OSSTF teachers union representative, said Wednesday afternoon as the rain continued to drizzle down on the dozen teachers picketing in front of Haliburton The teachers took turns picketing in three shifts during the day.

"People have been wonderful – lots of honks and waves. There's been lots of support from retired teachers and elementary teachers," she said, surprised, however, that there

Balloon from Sudbury follows the wind's path to Haliburton Lake yard

A STRONG WIND blew a balloon all the way from Sudbury to Haliburton Lake, delighting the recipients and helping to teach the sender about air currents. Margaret and Don Downey found the balloon at their cottage on October 1. It came attached with a note from a Grade 7 student named Johanna D. Her Sudbury classmates all released the balloons and will gather the results about where they land for their studies. Unfortunately, it's not known on which day the balloon was launched.

here, there & everywhere — news and events worth noting

Haliburton's 4Cs Food Bank was recently given a helping hand by Bell Canada's community relations team for Haliburton, Peterborough and Lindsay. Area representative Jim Winn presented Murray Tripp of the 4Cs a donation of $200, on behalf of the community relations team.

Many fans are mourning the recent passing of popular Canadian performer Ron Leonard, who was also a long-time instructor at the Haliburton School of Fine Arts. Leonard died on Oct. 5 following a brief illness. A man of diverse talents, Leonard taught courses in oil and watercolour painting for many years. He was scheduled to teach at the fine arts school this past summer, but had to withdraw because of his illness. In a career that lasted more than 60 years, Leonard entertained audiences around the world with his clever magic tricks and comedy. For more than two decades beginning in the mid-1960s, he appeared on CFTO's Uncle Bobby Show as Mr. Magic. He also made a name for himself as an athlete, motivational speaker and businessman.

Seniors – learn how to protect yourself against telephone and mail fraud. The Haliburton County Elder Abuse Committee is the proud sponsor of a PhoneBusters seminar featuring Det. Sgt. Barry Elliott. He'll be at the Haliburton Legion on October 20 from 10 to 11:30 to tell people how they can avoid being taken in by a con artist. Remember, if you think an offer for a "free" prize is too good to be true, you're right. There's probably some scam involved.

Local hospital workers were part of a lunch-time information picket at hospitals across the province on Tuesday. The workers, represented by CUPE and SEIU, want a negotiated contract which raises wages and protects job security. The unions are afraid some jobs will be contracted out.

When the Novice B Huskies hit the road, they'll be showing off their Highlands pride with style. On Friday night, Wayne and Judy Stoughton presented each team member with a custom-made tie to wear when they're representing Haliburton during away games.

Dorset's recreation centre is hosting a pumpkin carving contest. Bring your pumpkin to the centre on Fri. Oct. 30 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.. They will be displayed during the children's Hallowe'en party on the 31st. There will be various prizes, with adults and children encouraged to enter. The Hallowe'en party is from 7 to 8 p.m. on the 31st.

Scottish playwright John Herdman of the Scottish National Party will lecture on the nationalist movement at 8 p.m., Champlain College, Trent University in Peterborough. Peace pole pays tribute to the hard work, dedication of the late Bill Scott

A day of remembrance:

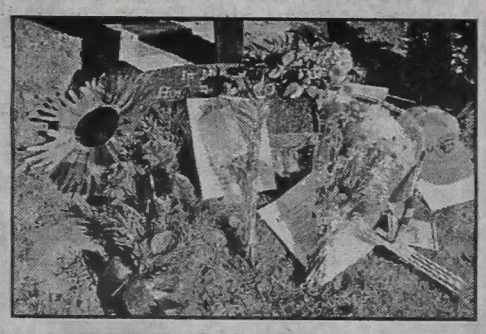
Father Roy Shepherd and other local ministers, above, dedicated the peace pole in memory of Bill Scott in a beautiful riverfront service on Sunday afternoon. The Brownies and Sparks, seated, sang Let There Be Peace on Earth. More than 150 people came to the service, including from left below, Scott's sister, Margaret Mark, widow, Betty, niece Jane Inwood and granddaughter, Maggie Scott. At right are some of the momentoes left on the plaque while the Legion piper played Amazing Grace.

MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

After dedicating most of his life to helping his community, his constituents and his country, Bill Scott has had a tangible symbol of hope dedicated in his memory.

On Sunday afternoon, more than 150 people gathered at the Kinmount Heritage Park to honour the installation of a peace pole erected in the memory of Victoria-Haliburton's long-standing Member of Parliament.

From 1965 to 1983, the Kinmount native devoted nearly all of his time to doing what he could to serve his constituents, rarely spending any weekend out of the riding, adding an official presence to events large and small. He died this past June.



"The simplicity of the peace pole extends a powerful message for global peace," said master of ceremonies Clayton Cameron, a member of the Kinmount Committee for Planning and Economic Development, which spearheaded the project.

"This parallels in a sense the memory of the man who we have come to honour today. Bill Scott could be characterized as a humble man, truly a gentle man, who through his good example and caring nature exemplified peace and harmony in all his work."

"He was an MP," Lutterworth councillor Bill Valentine said, "who truly represented all his people. He helped and defended everyone from government injustice and civil (question mark) servents."

When Valentine and his wife Sandy arrived in Uganda to teach, their luggage was sent to Singapore. In typical Scott fashion – he was always helping people deal with government bureaucracy – the MP lobbied CIDA and the insurance company to rectify the situation and was successful. Later, as part of his duties on a UN/Commonwealth committee, Scott paid the Valentines a visit in Uganda.

"Bill's kindness, humanity and concern for all will never be forgotten," Valentine said. "Bill will rest in peace."

"He was a humble man who was dedicated and worked hard, a humble man who made a difference," said Somerville Reeve Dianne Austin, comparing this to all the small acts which make peace possible.

Peterborough County Warden, and reeve of Galway, Cavendish and Harvey, Tom Flynn, also extended his gratitude for Scott's work on behalf of his constituents.

Former Somerville reeve John Huke said "MPs like Bill Scott did many deeds we never heard about."

Scott was a member of the committee which oversaw the maintenance of cemeteries for Canadian soldiers overseas. When Huke went to visit his brother's grave in Surrey, England, he said all Canadians could be proud of the way Canada honours its war dead.

"My father had a lot of friends," said Guy Scott, who spoke on behalf of his mother Betty and sister Laurie. "He made everyone feel good and hopefully people will feel good when they see this peace pole and visit this park."

The park setting of the peace pole was in many ways a fitting tribute, Guy said, remembering his father's efforts to clear the park of geese. The park is also the site of the lumber mill where Bill Scott worked as a young man.

"A few years ago this site was one of abjection and despair. Today it is a site of beauty and tranquillity," Guy Scott said, thanking all those who made such a transformation possible.

The dedication of the pole was led by four local ministers while the Legion colour party stood watch. Local Sparks and Brownies sang Let There be Peace on Earth before a Legion bagpiper played Amazing Grace while people walked up to the memorial and left offerings of rememberance, including flowers, a Canadian flag and a hunter's cap.

The peace pole is part of a global effort to spread the message of "May Peace Prevail on Earth."

Teachers keep their criticism of changes out of the classroom

weren't more students. "Two kids did drop off doughnuts, which was nice."

Willis says a lot of the students don't know why the teachers were on a one-day strike and had withdrawn their voluntary services for all extra-curricular activities. And while the teachers would like to explain the issues, they agree that the classroom is not a proper forum.

"A lot of the kids have questions but we've been instructed not to by the board and our union," Willis says. "It's a classroom, not a political forum and we want to stay as professional as possible."

The main stumbling block to a contract settlement has been the new provincial rules which say teachers must teach an extra 22 minutes a day. Because the high school is semestered with 75-minute periods, that means some teachers have to take on an entire extra course, teaching seven periods out of eight on a two-day rotation. The teachers want a return to six periods out of eight.

"If we get back six out of eight then we'll be able to bring back all the things we've done in the past because we'll have time to do it," Willis says.

Teacher Walter Tose says the government's television ad, which shows a clock as 22 minutes are added on, "is an outright lie. The government is asking us to teach an extra 75 minutes a day and take on another class with all the preparation and marking."

"(Premier) Harris has insulted my integrity and work ethic with no valid reason," Willis responds.

"That's what irks you," Tose adds, "but the bottom line is that we truly believe that if we don't maintain six out of eight, the quality of education will truly decline. Government ads say they want teachers to spend more time with students but it's more time with more students."

"Each kid won't see a teacher more often; we'll just see more kids," Willis says.

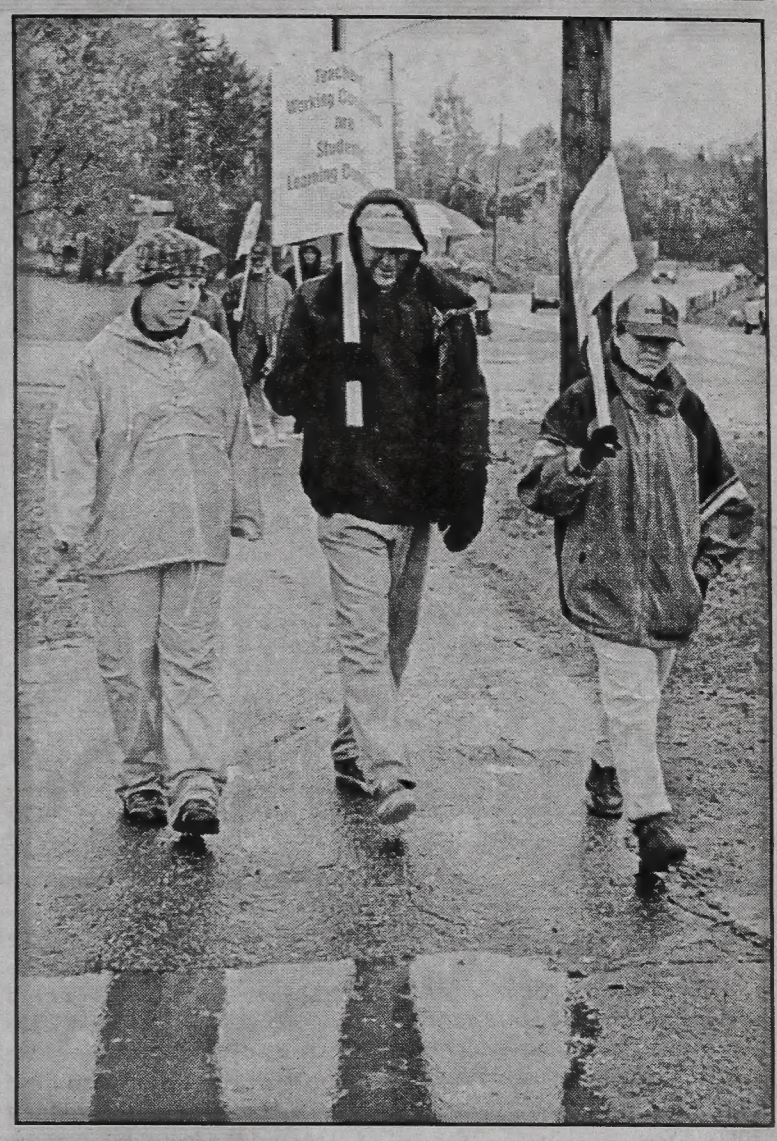
Guidance counsellor Al Oakley says "they're using semantics to create an impression that's not real."

Asked how the students are responding to the withdrawal of extra-curricular activities, including all team sports, Willis says "in our classrooms the kids are being normal kids. The kids who normally play football and field hockey really miss it and want to get back (to enjoying sports.) A lot of them don't understand why we're doing this but we're sticking to not talking about it in the classroom."

She says "not only have the kids been great but staff is wonderful, being really upbeat...

"We'd really like a settlement as soon as possible. We look forward to it."

Settlement was not the outcome of two days of negotiations last week. Contract talks continue but there's been a news black-out so no details are avail-



A wet walk:
It rained nearly all day on Wednesday when high school teachers in Trillium Lakelands staged a one-day strike. Local teachers picketed in front of the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School in shifts. Here, Tracy Hubbert, Irv Sternberg and Matha Steen take their turn protesting the changes brought about by the province.

TSW reservoir lakes fall to 33.9% as season ends

The stored water in the Haliburton lakes declined a further 4.4% to 33.9% by October 5. This was about 9.1% below normal and about 2.9% lower than 1997 for that date. In 1977 the levels were down 7.8% lower than 1998. In 1958 they were down to about 18% remaining.

The Kawartha lakes levels declined somewhat over the past week as well as 98.5%, which is still a big higher than normal due to leftover effects from recent rains.

Flows larger than their usual minimum have been the norm for the reserve lakes, but evaporation was still significant in causing the decline. Rainfall was less than 10 mm. in most of the watershed over the week.

This will be our last weekly bulletin on the lake levels until next spring. We hope the winter goes well for all.

SSFC's eco-tourism attracts attention through Internet

MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Thailand's beautiful corral reefs were a mecca for scuba divers, photographers and people wanting a bit more than sunshine as part of their holidays.

Unfortunately, however, the reefs were ruined by their beauty – so many people came, the reefs were virtually destroyed.

Not only did tourists want to take home pieces of corral, there was the pollution from the boats which brought them to the reefs, and the damage from the anchors. With nowhere to throw their garbage, they simply threw it into the sea.

However, tourism was good for Thailand's economy. Today, businesses, the government and educators are trying to work together to promote tourism without further damaging Thai's natural resources.

To further this end, the eco-tourism program at Sir Sandford Fleming College's Haliburton campus recently played host to two visitors from Thailand. Nantana Santatiwut and Chanchala Sivamard are with the Centre for Industrial and Environmental Training at Burapha University. They spent last Wednesday morning at the campus before visiting the Wolf Centre at Haliburton Forest as part of their five-week tour of Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia.

"We finally have the feeling that a lot of our scenic sites have been destroyed because of unawareness of environmental protection," says Santatiwut, who learned about the Haliburton program through the Internet. "We feel that eco-tourism will help the people to have a better understanding of the environment.

"We don't want to stop tourism. We enjoy it and gain a lot for the economy" but everyone, from the government to the businesses which profit from tourism, realizes that it can't be enjoyed at any cost.

"How do we manage both bringing people in but not destroying the very thing that attracted them in the first place," says Al McPherson, who initiated and oversees the Haliburton program, which was the first of its kind in Canada. "We have to allow tourism to happen but balance business and the environment."

He wasn't surprised when the two women from Thailand asked if they could come up for a tour. In previous years, SSFC has hosted visitors from such places as South Africa, the Virgin Islands and Mexico, and just that morning, the Internet site had been visited by people from Holland and Mexico seeking more information.

The women were with Jee Yan Chu, whose husband teaches at Brock University, which has been very involved with setting up partnerships with Thai universities. As well as visiting Brock, the Thai educators will visit other Canadian universities and, it's hoped, places where eco-tourism is a practice, not just a theory.

Of course, before they leave they have to be asked that classic Highlands question: What do you think about Haliburton in autumn?

It's a very easy answer for Santatiwut: "The scenery we drove through is fantastic – it's very beautiful."

A Learning Experience:

Two educators from Thailand recently visited the Sir Sandford Fleming College Haliburton campus to find out more about the eco-tourism program. At right, program director Al McPherson talks with Jee Yan Chu of Brock University while Nantana Santatiwut asks students Andrew Sauve, Jim Franchetto, Keith Yarnell and Jennifer Sipkens about the program. Chanchala Sivamard is in the background.

Elderly couple injured in Kinmount accident

An elderly man is in critical condition after a single-car accident last Friday in Kinmount, while the female driver received non-life-threatening injuries.

John Moreton was airlifted to St. Michael's Trauma Centre in Toronto from Minden Hospital with serious head injuries.

The driver of the 1996 Pontiac Sunfire, Eva Lane, was also first taken to Minden Hospital before being transferred to Peterborough Civic Hospital with less serious injuries.

The Coboconk OPP say the vehicle was travelling southbound on Highway 121 Oct. 2 at about 3:30 p.m. when it failed to negotiate a slight curve, went out of control, left the highway and rolled into the west ditch.

Coboconk OPP are continuing their investigation into the accident.

Although safe, Mortimer's ability to survive the winter unknown killed during the upcoming hunt. The moose hunt lasts from Oct. 19 to 24.

While the MNR said it couldn't do anything to guard Mortimer — its mandate is to look after populations of animals, not individuals — Ministry staff were growing more fearful of the potential for someone being injured by the moose.

Because of his calm nature, many people who went to visit Mortimer were not afraid to get very close to him, feeding him leaves by hand or petting his coat. Some reportedly even sat their young children on his back to pose for pictures.

"It became a public safety issue," said Kinsman. "The thing is people were forgetting he is a wild animal, and it's easy to see why. We had serious concerns that he could do something unpredictable and then people would be after us to do something with him."

Kinsman called retired MNR research scientist Ed Addison, one of North America's foremost moose experts, to orchestrate Mortimer's move.

Addison has extensive experience tranquilizing and relocating moose and other species of animals.

For a while Wednesday it looked as though Mortimer had chosen the day of his supposed move to play hard to get.

Several MNR workers searched the area the moose had been frequenting lately for more than two hours in the rain before he was finally found keeping two men renovating a cottage company.

Using a hand-carved "poke stick" with a large needle attached to the end, Addison injected Mortimer with a tranquilizer provided by Dr. Laurie Brown at Haliburton Veterinary Services.

Addison was worried the moose in his weakened condition might not be strong enough to handle the tranquilizer, but he regained consciousness well after being moved.

After he was sedated, Addison and the others were able to slide Mortimer onto a tarp and then drag him into a horse trailer for the trip to Haliburton Forest.

Mortimer's new living space is a three-quarter acre enclosure formerly occupied by wild boars.

Haliburton Forest staff will provide the moose with the same types of leaves he eats in the wild. They may also supplement his diet with corn and a pellet animal feed, said Kinsman.

Though Mortimer's move went smoothly, the moose's future remains uncertain.

It's impossible to tell if the animal has brain worms without dissecting his brain, but his behaviour and condition indicate that he likely has been infected by the parasite, said Addison.

Moose can pick up the brain worms, which live naturally in deer, by ingesting slugs and snails that have come into contact with deer droppings. The tiny worms migrate to the central nervous system and brain of the moose.

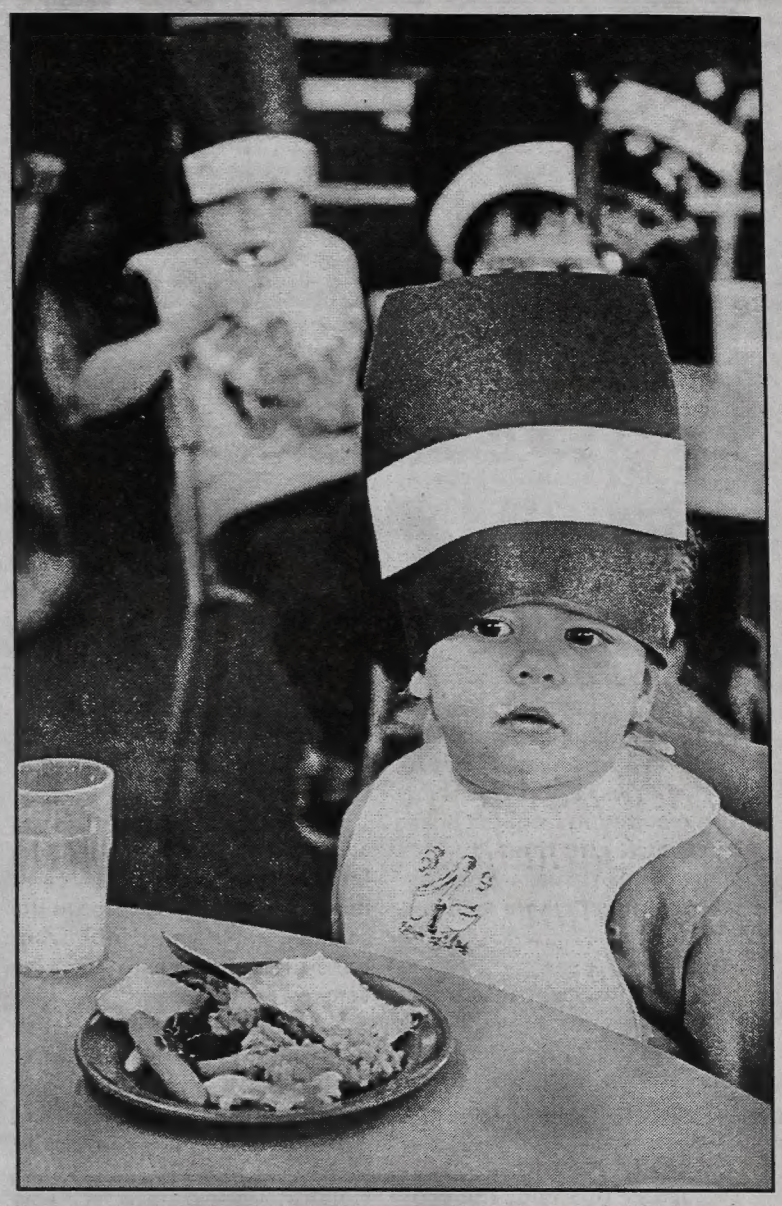
Whether the parasites kill the moose depends on how many of them make it into the animal's system.

Even if Mortimer doesn't have brain worms, he is probably too thin to make it through the winter on his own, said Kinsman and Addison.

Moose need a certain amount of body fat to make it through the long winter. Mortimer is just skin and bones.

But the gangly beast now has a greater chance at survival than he did left to his own devices.

People who want to visit Mortimer can do so for free by making arrangements at Haliburton Forest's main gate.



Wee Turkeys at WeeCare: The children at the WeeCare nursery in Haliburton enjoyed a traditionald turkey lunch which they "helped" to prepare. Here, Haley Acorn models off her festive hat.

Cyclists goes coast-to-coast

What began as a surprise visit to his parents' cottage turned into a cross-Canada trip for Ian Jamieson

PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Haliburton Lake cottager Ian Jamieson saw many of the country's remarkable natural attractions on his coast-to-coast cycling trip this summer, but one of the most satisfying sights he took in was a man-made sign along the road where Manitoba meets Ontario.

"Probably the thing I liked most was cycling past the Ontario border sign because that meant I had made it. Then there was the County of Haliburton sign because it meant I was here," he said two weeks ago from his parents' cottage, where he was relaxing after completing his 6,200-kilometre journey.

Jamieson, 35, set out alone from his home in Vancouver on June 20, intending to ride his mountain bike to the Highlands to pay his parents, Dick and Bernice, a surprise visit.

But after he conquered the grueling route through the Rockies and began coasting across the welcome flatness of the Prairies, his idea transformed into a plan to ride from one side of the country all the way to the other.

"Quite honestly when I set out from Vancouver I didn't really know how far I could go," said Jamieson. "My first objective was to get through the mountains to Lethbridge, then to Manitoba, then to here. By the time I got through the mountains, I was pretty confident I could make it."

Through the rain and the hills and the occasional lonely times, Jamieson was driven forward by thoughts of spending time at the summer retreat on Haliburton Lake his family has owned for 31 years.

"I think that was a real key motivator when it got ugly. And it did — there were probably a handful of times when you were ready to throw in the towel. But visiting family at the cottage is a pretty great motivator."

After more than a month on the road, cycling every day but two, Jamieson arrived in the Highlands in late July.

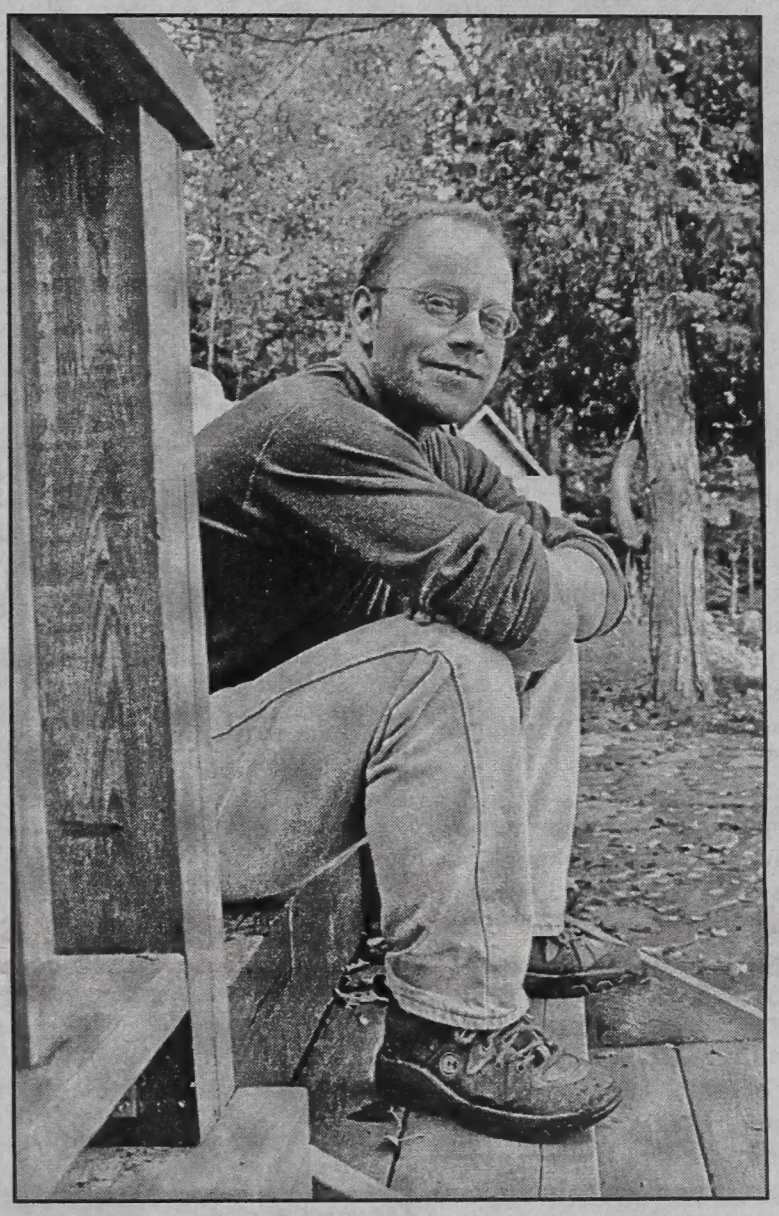
His parents were pleasantly surprised by his visit, but they were even more taken aback when they realized how he had gotten to the cottage.

"I didn't want to tell my parents because I didn't know if I could make it and I didn't want my mother to be worried about me on the highway with transport trucks whizzing by for 50 days."

Jamieson spent three weeks on Haliburton Lake with his family before setting back out on the road toward the East Coast. In 16 days he reached his uncle's home and the Atlantic Ocean in North Sydney, Nova Scotia.

With the weather turning cooler, Jamieson decided to leave cycling through Newfoundland for another time.

In all, it took Jamieson 51 days of riding to go from coast to coast, travelling through nine provinces and three U.S. states.



CROSS-COUNTRY CYCLIST: Ian Jamieson didn't plan on cycling across the country this past summer -- he just thought he'd pay his parents a surprise visit at their Haliburton Lake cottage. But the ride out from his home in Vancouver went so well, Jamieson decided to cycle onward to the east coast.

He rode along Lake Superior's south shore, dipping into Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. Riding conditions on the northern side of the lake are more dangerous because of heavier transport truck traffic and the lack of shoulders on the highway.

Jamieson logged an average of about 130 kilometres per day on his 24-speed mountain bike. Days when there were strong tail winds he could go as far as 170 or 180 kilometres. But early in the trip as he struggled across the mountains he was able to ride only about 95 kilometres in a day.

"I really got pasted coming through the mountains. I think the first 12 days I got rained on every day."

Jamieson packed very light to make the riding easier. He carried about 35 pounds of clothing, equipment and camping gear in two small bags attached to his bike.

"I even shaved my head so I wouldn't have to carry a comb or a brush or shampoo."

Because he didn't carry any cooking equipment, Jamieson needed to plot a route that took him through towns at regular intervals so he could buy food or eat in roadside restaurants.

Jamieson, who left a computer consulting job to take his journey, was as impressed with the many friendly people he met along the way as he was with the beautiful scenery.

Other travellers and people he spoke with at campgrounds and other stops on the road were always encouraging and eager to offer him help, he said.

While he's fitness conscious and mountain bikes frequently in Vancouver, Jamieson didn't train for his cross-country ride and had never made a similar long-distance trip.

"Completing the trip wasn't physical. It was more of a mental challenge. When you're getting rained on for the fifth day in a row and you've had a couple of near brushes with cars, it's more mental."

The only challenge Jamieson now faces as he prepares to fly back to B.C. is tearing himself away from the cottage in the Highlands he enjoys so much.

Dear Mortimer

SOME PEOPLE MAY ACTIVELY SEEK out fame, but for most, it is thrust upon them whether they want it or not. For instance, could there ever be a more unlikely celebrity than Mortimer the Moose?

Mortimer has become a cause celebre and is in more local photo albums than a department store Santa Claus. Animal lovers, parents with children and the simply curious have been making the trek to Spruce Lake east of Haliburton village to get their pictures taken with this gangly beast, who basks in all the attention. As Mortimer worked his way into people's hearts by eating from their hands, he became a communal pet, loved and shared by everyone. And he seemed to love everyone right back.

No one sought to "tame" Mortimer. Instead, it was this young moose which sought human contact. It started out simply enough, with Mortimer becoming a regular visitor to cottagers, just hanging around with the kids. Then people became regular visitors to Mortimer, amazed that he would let them get so close. By September, the visiting had hit its peak. But with October came an awful realization – moose hunting season was fast approaching. Something had to be done to protect Mortimer.

Something, but what? What do you do with a moose for a week? Where can you hide something that big, and what would you feed it?

A "Save Mortimer!" cry was heard throughout Haliburton. Few people feared a local hunter would pretend it's sport to kill a tame animal, more like a family dog than wild game. But what about hunters who weren't from here? Many people knew Mortimer was sick and wouldn't last the winter. (Even though moose are naturally ugly, Mortimer was unnaturally skinny and gaunt.) But with that odd and inexplicable human logic, people thought it was better to let Mortimer die a natural, noble death than be shot by someone who betrayed his unflinching faith in human kindness. If Mortimer was shot, everyone would feel a guilty sense of responsibility.

At one point, there was talk of establishing a Mortimer watch, people who would take turns keeping an eye out for hunters. Another suggestion was dressing him in a hunter's vest to let hunters know this wasn't an ordinary moose. What if this made him a clearer target, though? Could he be hidden in someone's back yard?

Responding to a flood of phone calls, the Ministry of Natural Resources was compelled to do something even though its job is to manage animal populations, not individual animals. Finally, it became a public health issue because the MNR was worried about people getting so close to him. He's docile now, but what about when rutting season starts, and the hormones kick in? We all know what odd transformations that can cause.

So, the MNR took Mortimer to Haliburton Forest, where people can still go to visit him. Tests will be done to try to determine if he is ill, and only time will tell if he survives the winter. It is funny to note that the MNR spent two futile but rainy hours in the woods looking for Mortimer to tranquilize him. A woman saw them and noted that Mortimer was usually found wherever humans are making the most noise. The searchers all fell silent and then followed their ears towards a garage that was under construction. They asked the workers if they had happened to see a moose. Sure, the workers said, he's standing right there. Now who wouldn't want to help a moose like that?

How can we help environment?

To the Editor:

I am writing in the hope of stimulating some discussion on what it means to be a person who is "for" the environment, and whether "environmentalists" ought to be considered a special interest group.

Here in Haliburton County, a large part of the geographic area is covered by living things, that is, by things not made by humans. We commonly refer to this state as a natural environment.

Only this year, a new insight came to me that I have found to be useful when considering what is "good", or what, among a variety of options is a better option for our community, indeed for any community. I was driving home from "the city", and became aware of a gradual uplift of spirit as I entered this natural environment. It dawned on me that it is here, in the natural environment, where true "production" is happening. Solar energy is gathered/trapped/harnessed/transformed (call it what you will) into a form that can then be used by us, the humans. All our human activities depend on the use of that stored energy. All our human activities are, in effect, consumption of that stored energy.

This is why I am "for" the environment, and why I think every thoughtful human should be for the environment. This is why I object when anyone suggests that people who are for the environment (and who might be labelled "environmentalists"), constitute a "special interest group". The environment is the only net producer of the energy we need to exist. The environment is complex beyond our understanding, beyond the understanding of every last one of our most brilliant scientists. Scientists understand pieces, but the best of them also recognize how little of the whole is understood. So in the absence of an understanding of this complex web of living organisms, I am convinced that the responsible course for humans to take is one which conserves the source of life.

> "We have the capacity to create new ways that are not so consumptive. The tragedy will be if we close our eyes and carry on with business as usual.
> CAROLYNN COBURN

When the human population was small, a reckless consumption of stored energy was comparatively inconsequential. Our impact was small. There were lots of plants to keep storing energy, and there was all that energy that was stored by plants millions of years ago (fossil fuels). But we know now that the world population has grown so large that our consumption of stored energy is affecting the climate. No longer can we assume that the energy-storing will go on somewhere else. There is no where else. This is why those of us who claim to be for the environment object to being classified as a special interest group. And this is why some of us may sound strident sometimes.

The chaos we are seeing in global economic markets, and the absence of credible analyses by the "experts" of the dominant paradigm, is powerful evidence of the folly of the pursuit of endless "growth". There are limits to a "growth" that is based on consumption. Our environment is telling us this. We have no choice but to listen. We have the capacity to create new ways of living that are not so "consumptive". The tragedy will be if we close our eyes and carry on with business as usual. There can be no post-environment economy.

Wood, worry and wondering

THE BRISK WIND managed to sneak under Helen's faded plaid jackshirt, throwing a chill up her back. She stopped long enough to tuck her t-shirt into her jeans before turning back to work. There was a small mountain of firewood in her driveway and with every piece neatly piled, Helen felt a tingle of satisfaction. If this winter was cold, she would be prepared. If the hydro went off, she would be prepared.

Lately Helen had found herself increasingly thinking in a survival mode. The ice storm of the previous year played a big part.

But the news from around the world intensified her feelings of uncertainty and possible global disaster lurking over the horizon. Talk of increasing economic chaos and "financial meltdown" did nothing to reassure her that people in high places were making the right decisions. Then there was climate change, weather extremes, an earthquake in Toronto, of all places. Only the other night the television had reported on dangerously high mercury levels appearing in animals and humans. Still nuclear waste was buried, pollution guidelines "relaxed".

There were times Helen truly felt her planet was spiralling downward and to what end, she did not know. But she worried about it. Sometimes. Unfortunately, she knew that there was very little she could do to change what appeared to be happening. A sense of loss of control was, she knew, a precursor to fear. And worse. She knew she was not alone in her worries.

The week before she had read in a magazine of global networks already in place of people who, having lost all faith in political leaders and world systems, were bypassing these to work together. They shared information from which they could then make plans. It sounded like survival plans. Scary stuff to someone living on the edge of the bush in Haliburton County.

down our road

sharon lynch

There. The wood was piled. While the rows looked solid and well-balanced now, experience had taught Helen there might be an unexpected collapse upon waking one morning. This the result of one of her climbing cats or some other, unseen and unknown force. Much like the state of the world. But the wood was solid enough and as long as she had matches, she would have heat.

There was some leftover stew which Helen heated up on the stove while the kettle readied water for tea. There were, in fact, some choices and changes Helen had made in her life over the past five years. They were small ones, but they had given her a feeling of informed control. She had thrown out the microwave, the electric kettle and used her clothesline whenever possible. Chemically pumped meat and poultry had disappeared from her household as had the many pills and liquids from the drug store.

The way she saw it, it wasn't so much the kind of changes she had made so much as that she had even looked at her life. From observation, she had noted many people seem to go through life on automatic pilot, letting habit and convenience pull them along.

The tea was ready. As she spooned a generous dollop of honey into it, she had to smile. A year ago she would never have imagined giving up toxic old white sugar. Another little change.

Taking the tea out onto the porch, she smiled at her wood piles. Her back would be sore if she didn't use the heating pad tonight. Better that then pills. Another little choice.

As she sipped her tea, it dawned on Helen that these little choices and changes were probably all anyone could ever hope to make. The big ones were beyond us but how we handled our own lives were, in part, still up to us. And if the world collapsed, what then? Well, worrying about the possibility would only take away her enjoyment of a beautiful fall afternoon. In the meantime, like the little red hen, she would store away all she could. Just in case.

THIS WEEK'S Pic of the Past shows Katherine Alberta Burk standing on the tracks at the Lochlin station. A quiet woman, married to Levi Burk, she devoted her time to her family and the Lochlin United Church. Our thanks to Bill Hartin for the photo.

Comments about trustees 'unfair'

To the Editor:

After reading last week's editorial I was compelled by Martha Perkins' writings to respond as I disagree with her choice of words and thoughts.

In her editorial, she suggests that local trustees make decisions "blithely" and "without thought for the families they serve." Over the past three years, I have attended many committee and board meetings and can confidently say that decisions involving students, transportation, curriculum, staff and facilities are never made blithely. To say that our board is "far removed" from the people they serve is also unfair. Talk to your trustee and you will find that they receive daily phone calls from the people in their communities. Ms. Perkins has the right to disagree and dispute the decisions made by the board, but she is wrong to imply that they are made in a vacuum or without the interests of students and their families at heart.

She says that the board is "using families as pawns" in its maneuverings against the government" but makes no mention of the government policies instituted last year which began this reduction of transportation funding, causing hardships for families. There are many of us who think that it is the government "using families as pawns" as the cost of their "good news messages" continue to escalate, all in an attempt to be re-elected.

Ms. Perkins does't acknowledge that the government has given the board less money to operate. She suggests the board has been given its budget, now live with it. That is not the attitude I wish the board to adopt, but rather, I hope they continue to request appropriate funding to operate a system that works for students, employees and the community. With less funding each decision becomes more difficult, ultimately affecting the quality of the system. Talk to any teacher and you'll learn teaching time in specialized areas such as library, guidance, phys. ed. and music have all been reduced due to the funding formula.

Communication is vital in any arena and Ms. Perkins is correct in saying that the public needs to be kept informed but it is not the board's responsibility alone. It is also my responsibility as a community member that the needs of students are realized whether it be in curriculum, appropriate texts, transportation, support staff or teachers. That is why the board holds open financial meetings at which the public is allowed to make presentations. The community can express its will at these finance meetings and, in fact, at any board meeting. This is the forum to have questions answered. The community does have access to the board and the responsibility to bring their concerns forward.

When the government decided to take on education, they became responsible for making sure funding was in place to ensure the quality of education they so proudly announce that they are providing. I hope our board never stops questioning our political leaders and I hope that the community will seek answers from all parties.

Big Brothers, Sisters receive strong support

Letter to the Editor:

Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Victoria-Haliburton has just finished a very productive summer and I want to take an opportunity to publicly thank some individuals and businesses for their continued support.

A thank you to Wigamog Inn Resort and Haliburton Highlands Golf Course for allowing our agency to run a Closest to the Hole competition for three consecutive weekends. It was a great fundraiser for us! A huge thank you for providing a day of water sports and loads of fun (along with lunch) to a large group of Bigs and Littles in August.

A thank you to all the local media for promoting our agency during September's Big Brother Month. We have had a large number of people inquire to be Big Brothers, Big Sisters and Big Couples as a result of all the publicity.

A thank you to the community! For your ongoing support, your interest and your financial investment. Without you, we could not provide friendship to the many children on our waiting list!

And finally, a thank you to the Board of Directors and Staff of Big Brothers and Big Sisters for their ongoing commitment to our agency! We do make a difference!

Wishing for return of the old days

To the Editor:

Once upon a time you had to go to the circus to see a tattooed lady, and read The National Geographic to see people with jewelry stuck in their noses and eyebrows.

It was the teamsters and the longshoremen who pranced and paraded their picket signs at the bidding of their union bosses, year after year.

I can even remember when teachers were respected members of the community whose main interests were in the needs of children and setting good examples for them.

I wonder if those days will ever return.

Junior curlers love to rock at Haliburton rink

Registration for junior curling club to take place Thursday

MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

There's nothing like throwing a rock down a lane of ice and having it slow to a stop exactly where you want.

That's just one of the reasons why 12-year-old Robert Ainsley and Reuben Maughan really love the sport of curling.

Of course, there's also the good food, being around friends your age and finding a fun way to keep busy in the winter.

Registration for this year's season in Haliburton takes place on Thrusday, and the two JDHES students encourage other young people to sign up.

"People should at least try it," says Robert, who's known to get a bit excited when he throws a good rock. "It's just fun."

"You like to be out there on the ice," says Reuben. "It's a team sport and on the ice, it's fresh, but not outside fresh."

Both Reuben and Robert have asthma, and curling is one of the few winter sports that doesn't trigger an ashthmatic reaction.

Junior curling, for ages 10 years to Grade 8, is Fridays at 4 p.m.. This allows the curlers enough time to walk from school and there's always some good food waiting for them at the curling club. They curl until 6 p.m., by which time their parents are done work and able to pick them up.

There's also a Saturday spent on learning skills and a Saturday bonspiel. (There might be two bonspiels this year.)

It's an expensive sport, too. The Haliburton Curling Club provides the brooms and allows the kids to wear good quality street running shoes which get covered in tape. The club only asks that the shoes are padded enough to keep the kids' feet warm.

This is the third year for junior curling. In the first year, the club had about 50 participants. Because some of those early junior curlers are now in high school, the Haliburton club is also offering a new high school league this year.

For more information about registration, please call 457-4021 or 457-1889.

READY TO CURL:
Reuben Maughan and Robert Ainsley like the challenges of curling, but also the fun. For the third year, the Haliburton Curling Club is offering curling for young people, including a new league for high school students. Registration is this Thursday.

Novice B Huskies beat Fenelon Falls in high-scoring opener

ELAINE SCHMID
Novice B Huskies

Fenelon Falls arena was the place to be for end to end action, as the Fenelon Flyers hosted our Novice "B" Huskies. Fast paced and high scoring, this game proved exciting as both teams played tit for tat. Not until the third period did the Huskies manage to stay ahead of their opponents, and secure a win.

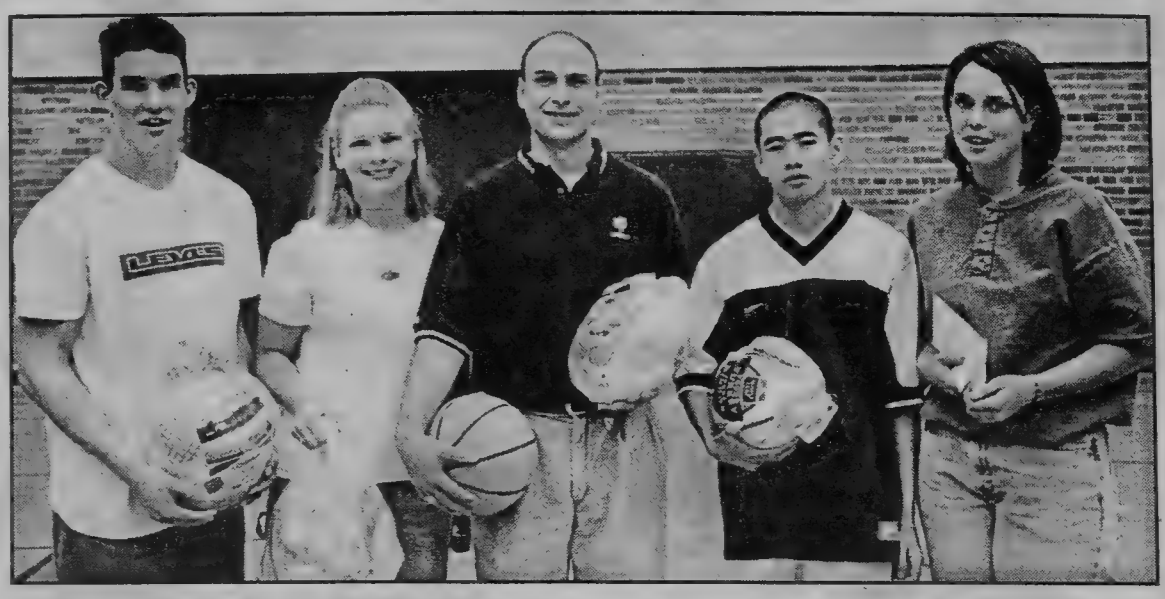
Netminder Lane "the train" Schmid tired to keep those Fenelon pucks out of the Husky net, with the defensive aid of Steven Miscio, Robert Lowes and Nathan Woodcock, but Fenelon snuck a few in.

Jesse Stoughton opened the scoring less than three minutes into the game with a breakaway on a pass from Robert Lowes. Fenelon returned fire to tie the game. A few moments later, on a layout pass from Jesse Stoughton, Steven Miscio went all the way to take the lead. Who says defencemen can't score? Fenelon came back to tie and took another for good measure. Daniel Sisson assisted by J. L. Frybort and Nathan Woodcock, found his mark in a scramble in Fenelon's end. The score was now 3 - 3. With 39 seconds left in the first Fenelon jumped ahead. Jesse Stoughton took it back nine seconds later.

The second and third periods were more of the same with goals scored by Daniel Sisson, Jesse Stoughton, Nelson Evans, and Steven Miscio. Assists went to Robert Lowes, Steven Miscio, Jesse Stoughton, Cole Scheffee, Scott Griffith, and J. L. Frybort. Final score: 10 - 8 Huskies over Fenelon.

Thank you Huskies for providing such exciting entertainment over the Thanksgiving weekend. We would also like to give a huge thank you to Wayne and Judy Stoughton of Stoughton Electric for the gift of Husky ties for all the boys. They really looked professional when they came to play Fenelon Falls.

Next game is in Haliburton, Sunday, October 18, 11:30 a.m. - Huskies take on Woodville.



SHOOTING FOR TURKEYS: HHHS held its annual turkey shoot last week, testing the basketball skills of students and teachers, who all hoped to bring home one of the turkey prizes on Friday. Those enjoying their success are Graham Schakelaar, Liane Dron, Dan Marsden,Sid Barkowski and Amy Petrow. The turkeys were donated by the Butcher Block, Coneybeare's, Dollo's IGA, Sandy Lane Resort and Mingles.

PeeWee Husky reps start with three-win roll

WADE MacINNES
OMHA PeeWee Huskies

Hello, and welcome to the 98/99 Minor Hockey Season. This year's Haliburton Pee Wee O.M.H.A. Rep. Team consists of nine forwards – Jeremy Miscio, Joel Johnson, Ross Gerry, Brandon Bowman, Shawn MacInnes, Matt Manary, Brandon Logan, Joey Sisson and Jason Chambers – and four defencemen – Joel Cooper, Matt Reil, Adam Hutson, and Norm Smith. Big Al Frybort and Jeremy Moynes share the goal-tending duties. The coaching staff has Butch Manary at the helm with Pete Johnson as assistant, Wade MacInnes as trainer and Greg Cooper as manager.

With Triple "A" Hockey sucking players from small town hockey the numbers are dwindling in every small centre. Fortunately for this year's Huskie Pee Wee team the extra lines will help shock a lot of their opponents.

In one pre-season game the Huskies came back from a 2 - 1 deficit to defeat their local rivals, the Minden Monarchs, 5 - 2.

On Friday, October 2, the season opened at home for the Huskies and they gained the two points by downing the Manvers Mustangs, 8 - 2. The following night on the road in Newcastle the Huskies fell 3 - 2 to the Stars.

Friday, October 9 the Huskies were home to the Bobcaygeon Cougars. This was no contest as the dogs guzzled the cats 15 - 1.

In hockey "team work" is key. The Huskie Pee Wee Rep Club is definitely a team.

Atom B Huskies open with 3-3 tie against Monarchs

DAN MacMILLAN
Atom B Huskies

On October 4, the Haliburton Atom "B" Huskies had their season opener at home against the Minden Monarchs. This year's version of the team is made up of Jenny Perrott, Kevin Croft, Dylan Metcalfe, Jeff Burk, Jamie Timbers, James Jowett (J.J.), Adam Trueman, Connor MacMillan, Mitch Bateman, Scott Clark, Michel Lerou, Kenton Winn and Greg Nimigon. The experienced coaching staff led by Roy Burk, is Jim Winn, Chip Trueman and Greg Metcalfe.

Early in the game Minden jumped out to a 1 to 0 lead and about two minutes later Kevin scored from Connor and Jamie to tie it up. With only 45 seconds left in the first, Minden scored a goal that was called back because they had a man in the crease. Early in the second period, Minden scored again making it 2 to 1. The Huskies had to kill off back to back penalties to end the period.

Midway through the third, Dylan scored on a beautiful end to end rush set up by Jenny. About three minutes later, Dylan scored again from Mitch and J.J. to give Haliburton the 3 to 2 lead. With a little over a minute left in the game, the Monarchs scored a power play goal to tie it. The Huskies applied pressure and with 35 seconds left, Kevin hit the goal post but that's as close as they could come. The final was a 3 to 3 tie with the goal that was called back looming large.

It was a great beginning to this new season with both teams playing each other closely and feeling each other out. It boiled down to good goaltending and good defense.

fitness tips

Lisa Box-Warburton

This week's fit tip:
Improve Your Body Image

Look in the mirror and what do you see? Probably not the model on the front of the magazine you have been looking at! The reality is that most of us will never measure up to that. We constantly try and reach unattainable goals that set us up for failure, depression and low self-esteem.

Here are some ways to improve your body image and stop the comparisons.

1. Stop talking negatively about yourself. Look for things you like instead.
2. Learn to like what you have instead of longing for what you don't have.
3. Take care of yourself inside eg.: nutrition, exercise. You will feel healthier and look healthier.
4. Set realistic goals.
5. Spend more time enjoying your relationships and life rather than striving for the perfect body.

Have fun and enjoy life!
This week's recipe:

Light Lemon and Olive Oil Pasta

(Single Serving)
2 cups fresh pasta - cook
Mix together and pour over hot pasta:
1/4 cup olive oil
1 tsp. lemon
1/8 cup tomatoes
Sprinkle fresh basil, ground pepper and parmesan.

Threat of winter hastens work on healthcare projects

■ The race is on to beat the coming frost; when temperature falls to 10 degrees, mortar will freeze

PETER DOWNS

Staff Reporter

With a bitter winter expected ahead, construction crews upgrading the county's two health-care facilities are moving quickly to finish as much outside work as possible before the frigid temperatures arrive.

The race is on for those excavating at Haliburton Hospital and Hyland Crest in Minden to beat the coming frost that will turn the ground as hard as rock.

"You're working with heaters, but if the temperatures gets below 10 or 12 (Celsius), the mortar between the bricks will freeze," said Bruce Steinburg, who is overseeing work at both sites for Bradscot Construction.

Steinburg led members of the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Board and Foundation on a tour of the Haliburton construction site Thursday.

Now that the heavy machinery is on site in both Haliburton and Minden and people can definitely see work taking place, interest and confidence in the projects is growing, indicated board chairman Hugh Nichol.

"It's nice to see it going at both sites ... Seeing is believing," he said.

HHHS board and foundation members are hopeful seeing will also translate to helping the fundraising effort to come up with the nearly $6-million local share of the $20-million bill for the projects.

At the Haliburton site, crews are digging a huge hole at the north end of the hospital to make room for a cistern and set the foundations for what will eventually be turned into an ambulance bay.

Over the next couple of weeks the parking lot at the hospital will be relocated to make room for an addition that will house 30 long-term care beds.

All footings and foundations for the addition should be in place before Christmas, Steinburg said.

The addition is scheduled for completion by next October.

"Once the addition is finished we'll move everything into it from the existing building so that it can be renovated," Steinburg said.

Work will begin shortly in the main entrance to the building, making it necessary for people to enter the hospital through the existing emergency ward entrance.

Construction is scheduled to be finished by June, 2000 at the Haliburton site and by April of the same year at Hyland Crest.

"(Haliburton hospital) doesn't have as much civil work as Minden, but it's just as complicated if not more because it's an actual hospital," said Steinburg.

At Hyland Crest extensive renovations will see 62 long-term care rooms rebuilt and an emergency care wing added to replace Minden Hospital.

Those who like to exercise, but want to stay indoors, can join winter walking club

Do you already have cabin fever just thinking about the approach of winter? If you like to get out for some exercise, but don't quite like exercising in the cold, then you can join the walking club sponsored by the Haliburton chapter of the Heart and Stroke Foundation.

In Minden, people can walk week day mornings from 7:30 to 8:15 at Archie Stouffer Elementary School. For more information, call Morris Duff at 286-6079.

In Haliburton, the week day morning walks are from 7:15 to 8:15 at the high school.

For more information, call Al Gostock at 457-3362 or Jacqueline and Kelly Metcalfe at 457-3756. "Be wise - exercise."

A Celebration of Achievement

More than $25,000 in scholarships, bursaries, awarded to top students at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School

MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

This county can feel proud of its high school students' achievements, but the students should also feel proud to come from a county which collectively donates more than $25,000 a year to the honours and awards program, HHHS Principal Gary Brohman said Saturday afternoon in front of a crowded auditorium.

"This is unbelievable," he said of the dozens of awards being given to students who excelled academically and as citizens of the high school. "I'm sure no other school surpasses us. You award winners are blessed to be living in such a fine community."

Brohman also praised the school's office staff, and June Smith in particular, for their hard work in preparing the three-hour program. Usually, teachers do most of the work, but they withdrew voluntary services during contract negotiations.

This will be the last time the county gathers in the old gyms. By next year, the new gyms will be ready and one of the old gyms will become a theatre.

Strength comes in numbers

■ Lake associations look at forming county-wide council

PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Executives from many area lake associations have agreed to look at forming a county-wide organization to strengthen their say on issues of common interest.

The groups were brought together at a meeting Saturday by the Haliburton Highlands Stewardship Council which has offered to help establish an association representing waterfront property owners throughout the area.

The proposed Haliburton Highlands Cottage Council would give those who live on county lakes a unified voice and greater power to influence local decision makers, said Steve Wilkins, stewardship council co-ordinator.

The council would also serve an important role in helping the many lake associations communicate with each other, said Wilkins.

Blair Johnston, a members of the Haliburton Highlands Stewardship Council, strongly endorsed the proposal on behalf of the Kenissis Lake Property Owners Association.

"As lake steward of the Kenissis Lake association I can say it's been very frustrating dealing with issues basically alone," he said.

As an example he cited a recent capacity study that determined the lake could handle more development based strictly on water quality testing without considering the concerns of property owners.

A county-wide association would help individual lake associations share information and respond to such issues, said Johnston.

"I think this has a lot of potential," he told the audience.

Not only would the association improve communication among the county's waterfront property owners, but also it would help other groups reach the various lake associations more effectively.

Though they share many common interests there is "no real communication" between many lake associations and the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association, said HHOA representative Keith Hodgson.

Volunteers with the outdoors association have worked with some lake associations, such as the Glamor Lake Cottagers' Association, on fishery rehabilitation projects, Hodgson noted.

The HHOA would look at getting involved in similar projects with other lake associations, if there were demand, he said.

"A group like this would be a total plus for our group ... Many of our projects overlap and we could work together on them."

Wilkins told those at the meeting the outdoors association has gained the kind of power a county-wide lake association could also have.

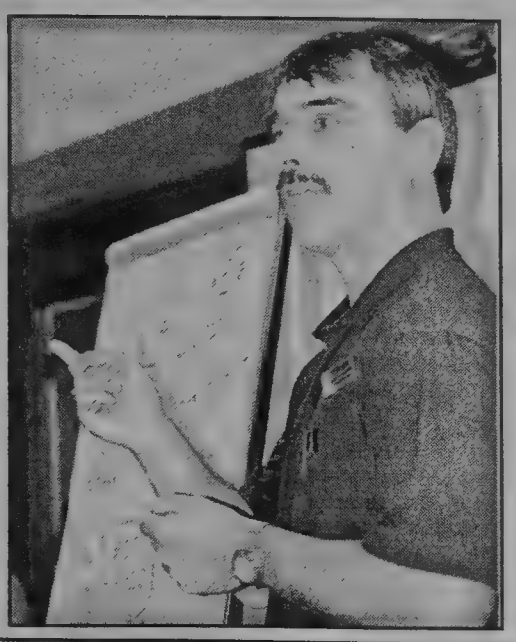
The association started a couple years ago with just eight members and has grown to more than 300 volunteers who have a strong voice and accomplish a great deal, he said.

"That's the kind of influence and impact this group could have. They have a lot of influence and get things done."

County warden Murray Fearrey acknowledged a county-wide association could have benefits, but he wondered if it might also create additional costs for taxpayers.

"Make no mistake about it there's going to be a long-term commitment there and there's going to be a financial commitment ... I guess I'm gun shy, but I have a feeling somebody's going to come up to us, the taxpayers, for funding some day."

Practically all cottage association executives at Saturday's meeting indicated they would like to meet again in May to discuss the feasibility of forming a county-wide cottage council in greater detail.



COTTAGE COUNCIL PROPOSED:

Steve Wilkins, co-ordinator of the Haliburton Highlands Stewardship Council, brought lake association executives together at a meeting Saturday to consider forming a county-wide organization to strengthen their voice.

- Convert your old paint brushes to new by soaking them in hot vinegar.
- On hinges, doorknobs and other hardware that you do not want painted, apply petroleum jelly.
- For small painting jobs, pour paint into an old cup - it will be much easier.
- Rub a soft bar of soap around window edges to avoid painting glass.

Irene had a loving husband, five loving children and strong support from her church, but there were times during her husband's illness that she needed a different kind of friend, someone who could be compassionate and helpful, yet still be objective enough to provide some practical advice, too.

When a person has a terminal illness, hospice is there to help

by MARTHA PERKINS

She found that friend in Debbie Bain, a local nurse who also volunteers for SIRCH's hospice program.

As a hospice volunteer, Bain visited Irene and her husband Edward (not their real names) at their Highlands home. As Edward's cancer worsened and spread, Bain became more and more invaluable in helping Irene cope with all the practical and emotional worries.

"I don't know what we would have done without her," Irene says of Bain's support.

Irene found out about the hospice program when her husband's cancer was first diagnosed, in 1996. Someone at the hospital gave her a card listing local resources, and SIRCH's program was on the list. When Irene phoned co-ordinator Linda May Powers, she was told of the Daffodil support group for families living with cancer. Edward didn't want to go, but he was agreeable to having a volunteer from the hospice program come to visit them at their home.

Although Irene and Edward both knew he was dying, they found it almost impossible to talk about it with anyone else. They wanted, or were at least willing to talk, but most family members couldn't face such an emotionally-laden conversation.

"When Debbie first came, she was just there for us. No one else came except family, who were so upset we'd talk about other things, ignoring the fact Dad had cancer and was going to die. Every time our daughter phoned we'd just start crying and when we were together it was worse. The family was too involved. They can't just stand back and say 'Maybe you should be doing this or that.'

"Debbie was my hand holder and mainstay."

By accepting Edward's approaching death, Debbie helped the couple prepare for it. One day, she asked Irene if they had thought about pre-arranging the funeral, a subject no one else in the family could even think about. The couple hadn't, so Irene and her son set about making the arrangements before it was an absolute need. "I'm glad we did because I think it would have been more than we could have handled (at the time of death)," Irene says.

"These are the types of things we, as volunteers, can bring up," says Bain.

She joined the hospice program partly as a way of dealing with the limitations she sometimes felt in her role as nurse.

"Over the years I've seen people, hospital patients, who don't have visitors or who when the visitors come, talk around the issues. As a nurse, I don't have time to be with them. Oh, that's what I love most about being a hospice volunteer – when my client's in the hospital I get to go and visit and sit. I can just be there."

Luckily, Edward didn't have to spend much time in the hospital. Throughout his entire illness, Irene cared for her husband at their home. Not only did neither one of them want him to be in hospital, but it was more practical to have him at home. "I don't drive," says Irene, who lives 15 minutes from Haliburton. All their lives as a couple, Edward took Irene everywhere she needed to go and they were used to being together. Indeed, their togetherness was one of the cementing bonds of their contented marriage.

Last Christmas, the family gathered together at Irene's home. By this time, Edward couldn't speak or feed himself. He was disoriented and unable to focus. However painful, it was good for the children to see him this way as they started to say their goodbyes, realizing that death was a part of life and could bring a merciful end of suffering.

A week later, Irene sat with her husband, singing him a few songs and reading from the Bible. She heard his last breath and then he was gone. It was the first day of a new year, the first day of being a widow.

For the next six months, Bain continued to visit with Irene, giving her the extra support to deal with all the repercussions of death and having to live alone. Today, even though there are no formalized visits, Irene takes comfort in knowing Bain is just a phone call away.

It is Hospice Week and both of them encourage others to get involved in the program, either as clients or volunteers.

"For me it's a way of living my faith – serving others is something we're asked to do. That, and I see so many people alone. It's a way of giving back to the community," says Bain. "I really love it. If you love people, then this is something you could do to help."

A CENTURY TO CELEBRATE:

Hyland Crest held a birthday party on Friday to celebrate the 100th birthday of resident Lula Ferrill. With her are her sons Walter Anderson, left, and Ken Ferrill.

Born in last century, Lula Ferrill celebrates her own centennial

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Lula Ferrill once said "I'm going to see the century turn twice because I couldn't remember it the first time."

She'll have to wait 14 months to her wish, but at least on Friday she was able to celebrate the first turning of her own century of life.

Born on October 9, 1898, young Lula was only a toddler when Canada welcomed the year 1900. Today a resident at Hyland Crest, it was fitting that the regular Friday afternoon Happy Hour was turned into her birthday party. After arriving at the Minden senior citizens home in 1988, she immediately lobbied for an opportunity to tipple at least once a week. "There's got to be somewhere around here to get a drink," she told the administration.

Eventually she got her wish, and every Friday afternoon drinks are served in the auditorium.

Mrs. Ferrill, therefore, isn't one of those people who will tell you that if you want to live until you're 100, you can't drink. Asked if his mother smoked, too, Ken Ferrill laughs. Whenever his mother was asked this question, she'd reply "I get pretty hot sometimes but I've never smoked."

Such a sense of humour was one of Mrs. Ferrill's ways of coping with a life that wasn't always easy or kind.

Her mother and father had already had two daughters before Lula was born on the Hunt family farm in Gray County, near Owen Sound. Her parents didn't have any money, and an unmarried aunt in Regina didn't have any children, so Lula was sent to live with her. "In those days if you had too many kids you gave them away," son Ken says. (When Lula's mother died, her father married her mother's sister and had three sons.)

Before Lula left for Regina, however, Lula enjoyed the thrill of being the first to be able to enjoy the weekly bath. A washtub would be filled with hot water and she'd climb in first. When she was done it was her sisters' turn, then the water was taken outside to the stock.

Times were not much easier at her aunt's Regina, where the dustbowl years decimated farms and left people in poverty.

Despite it all, or because of it all, Lula learned to love the small things in life.

"You give her a million dollars or a rose and she'd appreciate either just the same," says Ken Ferrill. "She never had anything, never expected anything, and was a happy person. She was really good natured."

Lula married twice. Her first husband, John Anderson, was the father of her son Walter, who was at Friday's celebration with Ken, who is the son of her second husband, Carl Ferrill. She is predeceased by both husbands and a son, John. There are eight grandchildren, "dozens" of great-grandchildren, and even several great-great grandchildren.

After living in Toronto, Mrs. Ferrill moved to Ken's farm near Norland before deciding she wanted to live in a seniors home. She's the one who chose HylandCrest. Unfortunately, several strokes in the past six months have diminished her health and she's now become quite frail. But at least she was able to get dressed up on Friday to be feted on the day she passed her own century mark.

Wilberforce youth lobby for basketball court

■ Fundraising plans have already been made as teens promise to help

by KERRY RILEY

The following are brief excerpts of items discussed during the October 5th Monmouth Council Meeting.

Wilberforce youth need more opportunities for entertainment in their own town and are willing to help provide them, says spokesperson Brandy Elder.

Heading a 24-person delegation, made up predominately of young people, she proposed that council erect a basketball court on the Lloyd Watson Centre grounds. She requested that council consider splitting the approximately $2-3,000 estimated cost.

Plans had already been made for a bike/walk-a-thon fundraiser, but council's approval was needed in order to proceed.

Reeve Keith Tallman's initial suggestion that a detailed proposal be brought to council next month was countered by parent Mary Barker, who indicated that they were already well organized, and their request clear. Elder stressed that they wished to hold the fundraiser before the cold weather.

Councillor Hilda Clark commended the students on their initiative, but also reminded them that the project would require a commitment to use and maintain the court, long after the initial enthusiasm may have worn off.

A resolution passed, granting permission to proceed with the fundraising.

Highs and lows of emergency planning

John Goverde, chair of the Community Policing Association, presented a copy of Monmouth's new Emergency Plan, which represented nearly a year's work on the part of the association's members.

The document contains detailed protocols for key emergency services, to be utilized should a catastrophe befall Monmouth township. Reeve Keith Tallman congratulated the Community Police, and Goverde, commenting that it was very important for any township to have such a plan in place, and that very few townships did.

Deputy-reeve Rick Forget noted that eligibility requirements for certain JEPP grants included such a plan.

A resolution passed accepting the document as Monmouth's official Emergency Plan.

Power outage

Last month's severe thunderstorms presented Monmouth with an emergency of somewhat smaller proportions than those dealt with in the new plan. The power was lost in town for about six hours, and Councillor Jim Deterling said this revealed that the Lloyd Watson centre had no functioning exit lighting or emergency lighting. (A wedding celebration was in progress at the time.)

Further discussion revealed that there were no smoke alarms and doubt was raised over the presence of a fire extinguisher. Further, the phone in the main entrance did not work.

Plans were made to immediately address the shortfalls.

Lottery money is awarded locally

Council considered six applicants for the one-time-only money being offered as a result of the cancellation of plans for provincial charity lotteries.

Haliburton Highlands Health Services was among the applicants, and Reeve Tallman commented that while his preference was to allocate the money locally, the involvement of the hospital made the decision more difficult.

Councillor Clark expressed some reservations about the application submitted by Wilberforce Minor Hockey. Based on a rather poor attendance at their latest fundraising effort, she wondered how much support they had in the community.

After repeated interjections, observer Rick Huffman was admonished by Reeve Tallman to refrain from participating in council debates.

In the end, the $3,394 was divided equally between minor hockey and community policing.

In Other Matters....

• A resolution passed accepting the 98/99 Winter Roads Maintenance Agreement with the County of Haliburton. Reeve Tallman noted the that Monmouth may, at the request of the county, add the early morning ploughing of Hwy. 648 from the 121 intersection to the school, to its list of roads maintenance duties this winter.

• Reports from county indicated that work on the Esson Bay boat launch was due to be completed October 5.

• The tender to operate the arena snack bar was awarded to Lynn Huffman, for $1250. She was the only applicant.

• Council agreed to send a letter to the police inquiring about actions taken regarding the vandalized Lloyd Watson Centre sign. "An officer was sent to investigate," commented Reeve Tallman, "but to my knowledge, no one was interviewed."

Group wants to simplify ways of sharing data

by JANE SELBIE

Can Haliburton County get a shared data base?

Forty-plus individuals representing a wide variety of interests met at the Haliburton Legion September 30 for an all-day session to look at how to make that happen. The meeting was hosted by the "Community Capacity Building Committee", a group of primarily social service providers mandated last spring to address a potential gap in service to the community created by the dissolution of the Social Action Committee when it amalgamated into Family Services of Haliburton County.

In the course of the day, it became apparent that the range of data collected in the county is extensive, but sharing it poses a problem. Expert knowledge came forward to show the wide-spread data collected by agencies such as the Ministry of Natural Resources, the Health Unit, Haliburton Highlands Hospital Services and the county. Other service-based community agencies collect specific client-centered information on which to base service needs and trends.

By the end of the day, it was agreed to concentrate on establishing a "Metadata Catalogue" (information that indicates the quality, type and accessibility of data) of existing data. A task group comprised of Ted Volpe and/or Donna Dillon of the Ministry of National Resources, Fay Martin of Family Services, Sharon Petrisor of the strategic plan Economic Development Committee, Eric Lilius of the Trails and Tours Committee, Stephen Foster of the Federation of Cottage Associations, and another potential member will meet to adapt the established metadata standard to create a template into which the county data from all sources – those represented at the meeting, as well as others, including small informal groups – could be gathered.

Ted Volpe talked about Geographic Information Systems. This technology allows many different kinds of information to be displayed on a geographic base, a map. If various data holders agree on the base map to use, their data is easily comparable and easy to read: it's a map with selected kinds of information on it. Ted will demonstrate GIS to the public on November 10 in the evening at a place to be announced. Watch for further information.

Kid Kompanions

■ Family Services' program gives kids a special friend while parents get an extra little bit of support

MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

WITH EIGHT OTHER KIDS at home, Wendy Nicholls really enjoys the one chance a week when she can get away with her special friend, a friend no one else in her family has, a friend all to herself.

The seven-year-old girl doesn't mind sharing Jennifer Logan in the few seconds after Jennifer arrives at her house, but after all the greetings of hello, Wendy quickly tugs on Jennifer's hand and pulls her towards the door. "Come on, let's go."

And with eight other kids to look after, ages 1 to 13, Wendy's father and stepmother appreciate the chance to have one less child to attend to, giving them more time to spend with the others while knowing that Wendy is having a fun time on her own.

Wendy is one of the children involved in the Kid Kompanion program at Family Services of Haliburton County. Once a week, her volunteer companion, 18-year-old Jennifer, arrives and takes her out for an hour and a half. Wendy thinks all they do together is play, but since a lot of the games have an educational component, she's also doing a lot of learning, too.

There are 10 other kids on the Kid Kompanion waiting list, however, who don't have a match with a community volunteer. Volunteer director Marilou Mizzan hopes other people, at 16 and older, will join up with the program that has provided Wendy and Jennifer with so many benefits.

"I wanted to make a positive influence on someone's life, help her out with something she needs help in," Jennifer says of why she signed up to be a volunteer in June. "It raises my confidence to see how Wendy looks up to me.

"It's a nice feeling. I really look forward to our time together. Even if I've had a bad day, Wendy cheers me up."

Wendy's father, Sheldon Nicholls, says Wendy's enjoying it as much as Jennifer. "Her school work has improved, her social skills are getting better, she gets the exercise and she's getting to know the community better."

Wendy had been having a few problems in school when her dad signed her up for the Kid Kompanion program. Darlene Box, who's a resource consultant at Family Services and was familiar with Wendy's needs, devised a series of games for Jennifer and Wendy to work on. The games are fun, but at their core, they're also educational.

When Jennifer picks up Wendy, the two usually go to the Family Services office, where they can have a quiet space for their educational games. Wendy doesn't mind paying attention for a half hour, because she knows the reward is an hour of real play afterwards – going for a swim, feeding the ducks at the park, listening to Jennifer's music.

'It's good to have a balance between fun and work," Jennifer says, "especially when we were getting to know each other at first."

Jennifer, a high school student who's having to decide what career to embark upon, appreciates the support she gets from Family Services. She encourages other people her age to get involved with the program for the experience and fun.

Sheldon Nicholls also sees the benefits and encourages other families, as well as volunteers, to participate. (His elder daughter, Amy, also has a Kid Kompanion.)

Although there is a Big Brothers/Big Sisters association which covers Haliburton, that organization's emphasis is on kids from single parent families, Mizzan says. At Family Services, it doesn't matter whether it's a single mom who can't keep up with her son's demands to play football or go fishing, a traditional family, or a blended family like Sheldon's who just need a break or a little one-on-one attention.

"There are a lot of reasons why a family would need extra support," says Mizzan, adding that families do not already need to be with Family Services to become involved.

Volunteers can be of all ages and backgrounds, and how much time they spend with their young friend largely depends on the volunteer. Wendy and Jennifer spend an hour and a half a week, but Wendy's older sister, Amy, spends twice that much time with her Kid Kompanion. Some volunteers have been known to take the child on a day's outing.

Activities are also based largely on the volunteer's interests and the matches will try to put people with similar interests together.

To find out more about the program, please call Marilou Mizzan at 457-5345.

Birthday greetings to Erica Bruhm, Christopher Bennett, Paul Morley, Jessica Steele, Bill Elliott and Gordon MacKay.

It was a beautiful Thanksgiving and we hope that everyone enjoyed a happy one. We know that many people have problems. If we look around us there is always someone worse off. So we all have something to be thankful for.

The Community Christmas Bazaar will be coming up on the last Saturday in November, which falls on November 28. So get out the knitting needles, needle and thread or whatever and get busy. Time has a way of disappearing. Men can always show their skills in the workshop and produce many novelty and useful items.

Who says Texas is the only place they produce everything bigger and better. If you go through downtown Dorset, take a look by the Post Office and in front of Robinson's General Store and you will see two huge pumpkins and a very large squash. The pumpkins weigh in at 400 and 439 pounds, respectively, and the squash is also in that size range. They were grown right here in Dorset, in the garden of Bob and Shirley Webb. How many pumpkin pies would one of those pumpkins make? I wouldn't dare speculate. We congratulate the Webbs for their initiative in attempting to develop these large vegetables and having the ability to reach their goal.

Council for the Township of Sherborne et al is hosting an informal meeting for all concerned citizens to discuss the future of our tower. Please join us at the Dorset Recreation Centre, Thursday, October 15 at 6:30 p.m. in the small meeting room downstairs. All suggestions and ideas are welcome.

Congratulations to our new bride and groom Chantal Mouland and Rob Hamilton, who were joined in Holy Matrimony, on Saturday, October 3 at Knox United Church, Dorset. Rev. Susan Manning officiated. The reception was held in the Common Room at Camp Dorset.

Environment committee meets Oct. 17

The next meeting of the Advisory Committee for the Environment will be held at the Lloyd Watson Community Centre in Wilberforce on Saturday, October 17th at 11 a.m.

This month, we will have a guest from the Ministry of Natural Resources speaking on wetland protection in Haliburton County.

With the reduction in staff at the Ministry of Natural Resources, private citizens have a greater responsibility to learn how to take care of the lands we hold in trust for future generations.

The November meeting will be held in Sherborne Township. We invite the general public to attend, be it to observe, or to raise a particular issue.

For more information, call Carolynn Coburn at 286-2484, or e-mail to ccoburn@halhinet.on.ca.

Haliburton Legion representatives David Stirrett and Ed Pickard present a donation of $5,000 to Dale Walker and Dwaine Lloyd, accepting on behalf of the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation. The donation was raised by proceeds from the Legion's Lucky Calendar. Next year's calendar is now on sale.

The Thanksgiving Turkey Dinner presented by the Monmouth Agricultural Fair Board was a great success. The food was delicious – especially the tasty turkey and pies. Thanks to the workers for the meal and for the autumn decorations that gave such visual pleasure.

Before dinner, awards were presented to winners of the Poster and Essay Contest on the theme "A Day at the Fair". The poster prizes went to Ryan Galea - first, and Tessa Barnes - second, in new beginners; Megan McCrae - first, and Christopher Carey - second, in Senior Kindergarten; Carolyn Barnes - first, and Richard Stetham - second, from Grade 1 and 2.

In the essay class: Trish Vanier - first, and Robert Stetham - second from the Grade 3 and 4; Jennifer Galea - first, and Laura Riley - second, from Grade 5 and 6; Daniel Vanier - first, and Sandra Riley - second, from Grade 7 and 8.

The Fair Board and the Sanderson family, organizers and sponsors of the poster/essay contest, thank all the children who submitted entries and congratulate the winners.

The book/yard sale at the library was also a busy activity on Saturday. Bessie Croft and Donna Atkinson, librarians, were pleased with the donations of items for sale, and with all the people who came out to buy. They were also delighted to receive the generous proceeds from a silent auction held recently at the local LLBO, on two wine racks. Thanks to the staff there.

On Sunday, October 18, the Wilberforce United Church congregation will be celebrating the 109th anniversary of the founding of that church. Everyone is welcome to this 11:30 a.m. service at which the Gentlemen of Song will be guest singers, and to stay for lunch.

The Mural Committee would like to announce that Phillip Agnew was the lucky winner of the painting that mural artist, Allen C. Hilgendorf will paint for him. The draw was conducted during the Fair Board Dinner by MC Ken Sanderson, with Trish Vanier making the draw. Phillip will choose the subject of this "commissioned" 11 by 15 oil painting.

The ever popular Gentlemen of Song presented a concert at Legion Branch 624, Wilberforce to an appreciative audience.

Sincere condolences go out to Effie (Minnie) Compton and her family on the sudden death of husband/father/grandfather Alec Compton, on Friday, October 9, 1998 at his home. The Comptons retired from the Toronto area to a home on the Hadlington Road several years ago. They have always been willing workers, especially at the Wild Game dinners at the Legion. Always an active man, Alec was on a ladder working on the house when he was taken by a major heart attack. He will be greatly missed by his family. The funeral was from St. Margaret's Church with the Rev. Gerry Johnson officiating.

Women's spirits "lift" at meeting

by ELEANOR COOPER

The Baptist Church's LIFT program on October 1 presented Janet Judd of Muskoka area on "Let's Talk Turkey". Shirley Godjas' singing and Judy Henderson's painted flower pots demonstration also added to the interesting evening. Thanksgiving treats of various kinds were appreciated at refreshment time.

Next month's LIFT on November 5 features Penny Saunders and a cookware demonstration.

Maple Lake United Church's U.C.W. met at the church on October 7 in the afternoon for their monthly meeting, the main discussion being the planning of the craft and bake sale on October 10. Hazel Dorman led the devotional time.

Sid and Louise Cooper attended a wedding reception in New York city on the weekend for Michael Gaouette and his bride, Michael being the son of long time friends, Rae and Elsie Gaouette. They also visited the Cassidys in Iroquois, Ontario.

Derek and Paul Rolfe experienced great success during the Studio Tour days. Gordon Freer's stone sculptures also displayed there created much interest and sale. It was the greatest influx of people so far since the Studio Tour has started.

Brrrr!

When winter winds blow, you'll be warm and comfortable if you make sure your home is energy efficient

WITH WINTER just around the corner, now is the time to take a close look at how you can improve your energy use around the home. By taking a few simple steps, you can save money and conserve energy, while staying toasty warm as winter winds blow. We can all sleep a little easier at night knowing home energy bills aren't going through the roof. Energy efficiency is the key. And because energy use impacts on many of today's environmental problems, by conserving energy you'll also be helping the planet.

Here are some guidelines on how you can conserve energy. Take a few minutes and follow this winter home check-list to see if you're using energy wisely.

FIRE UP THE FURNACE

During the winter, your furnace is your best friend. With heating accounting for about 75 percent of a home's energy consumption, it's important to make sure your furnace is working properly and efficiently. Regulating heat is also important. Use the thermostat wisely and you'll barely notice the difference, except on your heating bill.

• Have you had your furnace serviced this year? A furnace should be serviced and cleaned at least once a year by a certified heating contractor. Cleaning keeps it free of dust that can clog vents and make it work harder and use more energy. You should also change filters twice during the season.

• How efficient is your furnace? Check with your heating representative to make sure your furnace is up to today's modern efficiency standards.

• What temperature is your thermostat set at? Lowering your temperature just 5°C can save you up to seven percent on heating costs. A good rule of thumb is to set your thermostat at 21°C while you're at home during the day, and at 18°C during the night.

• Is your thermostat programmable? It's easy to install a thermostat that will automatically adjust the temperature in your home – keeping the house cooler while you're out, and warming it up just before you get home!

HELP YOUR WATER HEATER

Water heating can account for 20 to 25 percent of your home energy bill. Making sure you're using hot water efficiently will save you money all year 'round, not just during the winter.

• Is your water heater well insulated? Make sure it is! Insulation helps it heat water faster and more efficiently. For faster hot water, install a propane or oil water heater. It can give you a full tank of steaming hot water in just one hour, compared to three or four hours other water heaters can take.

• Are you wasting water? By installing an energy-efficient shower head, you can reduce the hot water you use for showers by up to one-third. You'll still get a relaxing hot shower, but you'll use less water – and save money from going down the drain.

KEEP THE HEAT IN

Leaky windows and doors can have a big effect on home heating costs. Not only do they let cold air in, but they let warm air escape.

• Feel a draft? To check windows and doors for leaks, hold a candle near the area. If it flickers, there's a draft. Another sure sign is if frost starts to appear on the inside of window panes. Use caulking or weather-stripping to seal them up tight. Where possible, double glaze your windows by adding an extra layer of glass, or cover them with clear plastic sheets.

Conserving energy makes economical – and environmental sense. By taking the time now to take a close look at a few key areas around your home, you can make winter seem a little easier to bear.

EIGHT energy saving IDEAS

1. Seal leaks around doors, windows and other openings, such as pipes or ducts—with caulking or weatherstripping.

2. Set thermostats between 65 and 70 degrees in the winter, at least 5 degrees lower when sleeping, and at 58 degrees when away from home for more than a few hours. (Warmer temperatures are recommended for homes with ill or elderly persons or infants).

3. Set water heater temperatures at 140 degrees (at 120 degrees in homes with infants or elderly persons to guard against accidental scalding), and install waterflow restrictors in showerheads and faucets.

4. Change filters or clean the filters in heating and cooling units twice a year. Close vents and doors in unused rooms. If pipes or ducts run through unheated areas, insulate them.

5. Use drapes, shutters, awnings, shade trees, glass with reflective film or solar screens to keep sunlight out in the summer and let it in during the winter.

6. Check to see if attic and basement (or crawl space) have the recommended level of insulation.

7. If you have a woodburning fireplace, consider installing a propane fireplace insert, which can save on energy costs compared with wood. A propane fireplace also will dramatically reduce the air pollution created from burning wood.

8. When buying new appliances, compare energy efficiency ratings and annual operating costs. A slightly higher initial cost for a higheffi-ciency appliance could pay itself back in a very short time through energy savings.

New oil furnace technology produces big cost savings

OIL-HEATING technology has come a long way in recent years — so far, in fact, that new furnaces can operate at efficiencies of more than 90 percent.

Furnace efficiency refers to the percentage of available heat that is actually delivered to the living space in your house. Homeowners in search of a new furnace will come across two common measurements: seasonal and steady-state efficiency.

Seasonal efficiency rates the performance of a furnace throughout an entire heating season. It takes into account the less efficient start-up and cool-down stages of the firing cycle, as well as the periods of peak performance. Seasonal efficiencies are not yet available for most furnaces in Canada (when figures are available, they are most often used to compare new equipment).

Steady-state efficiency is calculated during the furnace's peak performance period — after the furnace is warmed up and before it cools down. It indicates the optimum performance level achieved by a furnace and is usually higher than the seasonal efficiency figure for a given appliance.

Most oil furnaces in Canada more than five years old are conventional units, typically equipped with a conventional burner and a barometric damper. A well maintained, well tuned conventional furnace will generally operate at about 73 percent steady-state efficiency and 60 percent seasonal efficiency.

New oil furnaces on the market are either based on the conventional model (but equipped with efficiency-enhancing devices) or are of an altogether different, improved design.

The most dramatic energy savings are possible with condensing oil furnaces.

One of the most common pieces of equipment installed on new furnaces is the flame retention head burner. This burner improves the oil-air mixture, which results in more complete combustion and less soot deposit on the heat-exchange surface. Retention head burners also facilitate significant nozzle downsizing, enabling the furnace to better meet the heating requirements of the house and reduce fuel consumption.

Delayed action solenoid valves are also common devices on new oil furnaces. These valves prevent oil from flowing to the nozzle until the fuel pump reaches its correct operating pressure, and close the oil flow line immediately when the burner shuts off. These two procedures ensure complete combustion of the oil and prevent smoke, fumes and soot buildup, resulting in a cleaner heat-exchange surface and reduced fuel costs.

Much of a conventional furnace's inefficiency is caused by heat lost up the chimney. This heat loss occurs because air escapes around the furnace's barometric damper. Many new furnaces are equipped with an additional damper (downstream from the barometric damper) that closes automatically when the furnace shuts off and opens again only when the next heating cycle begins.

In one of the newly designed high-efficiency furnaces, induced-draft fan units, combustion gases are pulled from the furnace and forced up the chimney. The chimney opening is much smaller than on a conventional furnace and the barometric damper is eliminated, so substantially less heated air is lost.

The most dramatic energy savings are possible with condensing oil furnaces. In these applications, much of the heat contained in flue gases is extracted by a secondary heat exchanger. When these gases cool sufficiently, the water in them releases additional heat that is also captured. As well, condensing furnaces do not require a conventional chimney. These design improvements result in higher seasonal and steady-state efficiencies than for any other furnace design.

Wood appliance safety begins with good advice

Certification programme ensures that wood heating installers make safety the highest priority

HEATING with wood can be a very satisfying experience. There's nothing quite like the warm glow of a wood fire on a cold winter's night. But are you sure that your wood heat system is as safe as it could be?

Inefficient wood stove operation and poor stove design or installation can increase the amount of pollutants in the air. Improving your stove's combustion efficiency will automatically reduce wood smoke production. To reduce wood smoke, pay close attention to what you burn, when, where and how you burn it. A few simple steps can improve wood stove efficiency by up to 50%. This reduces harmful emissions and saves you both work and fuel dollars.

Ideas about wood heat safety have changed over the years. Until recently, it was often hard to get good advice on how to install a wood heating system safely. That is no longer the case!

Created over a decade ago, the Wood Energy Technical Training (WETT) program was designed to educate wood heat appliance retailers, installers, sweeps and inspectors.

WETT certified professionals, the graduates of the WETT Program, can give you up-to-date advice on safe installation, if you are buying an appliance or upgrading your wood heat system.

There's a whole team of people in your community – including your fire chief, building inspector, wood heat retailer and chimney sweep – who can help you make sure that your installation is safe.

WETT certified professionals can guide you through the choices in the marketplace creating a unique solution for your family living space – regardless of whether your goal is to cut your heating bill or add an inviting nook to watch a crackling fire.

WETT certified professionals are your local experts. They assess the size, layout and age of your home and advise you which appliances are right for your home, helping you avoid the costly and dangerous mistake of choosing a space heater too large for the space.

WETT certified professionals keep abreast of all new appliances on the market and can help you choose one of the many EPA certified appliances.

Certified appliances burn more cleanly and efficiently than most older models. WETT professionals can show you the right burn techniques to get the most out of your appliance.

Choosing the location of your appliance is an integral part of your future enjoyment of it – as well as having safety implications. WETT professionals have the experience necessary to help you make the right choice.

A safe installation will only stay safe if you operate and maintain it properly.

Check the chimney and flue pipe often for creosote build-up. Have them cleaned regularly.

Use properly seasoned wood and follow proper burning techniques to minimize creosote production.

Have a WETT certified professional check flue pipes for corrosion at least once a year – late spring, at the end of the heating season, is the best time. Replace any pipes that are beginning to corrode. Don't wait until there are holes. It may be too late!

Empty ashes frequently. Use a covered metal bucket for ashes. Store it carefully – either outside or on a concrete floor well away from walls or anything that could burn.

Check the door latches, hinges, gaskets and firebox parts of your appliance regularly to be sure they are tight.

Give your system an annual tune-up.

Be sure to follow the manufacturer's instructions for your appliance.

Creosote left in flue pipes and appliances can mix with humid air in the summer to form a very corrosive mixture. You can avoid off-season corrosion problems by thoroughly cleaning the system after the last fire of the heating season.

WOOD HEAT TIPS

TIP #1

Use only properly seasoned dry wood. It will burn more cleanly and produce less creosote.

TIP #2

Never let the fire smolder. But don't get carried away building a roaring fire either. Your fireplace might not be able to take the heat! A steady burning, three log fire is best.

TIP #3

Never burn chemically treated wood, wrapping paper, magazines or other coated or coloured papers in your fireplace. These can give off noxious substances when burned.

TIP #4

If your fire's built properly using seasoned wood and your chimney is working well, you shouldn't need bellows.

TIP #5

Use a mirror and flashlight to inspect the damper. Never look directly up the chimney unless you're wearing proper eye protection.

HOW TO HEAT SAFELY WITH WOOD STOVES:

Proper installation is essential, and local fire departments can tell you how it's done.

ON A COLD fall or winter night, there's nothing better than to fire up a wood stove to provide enjoyable and efficient heat.

To maximize efficiency and safety, it is important to plan the construction of your stove carefully, have it approved by your local fire department and maintain it properly.

Ontario's Office of the Fire Marshall publishes an informative pamphlet on wood stove safety that is available at your local fire department. It outlines the wood heating system, fuel, installation, operation and maintenance.

Stoves, it says, are meant to heat only the room in which they are placed and it is important to install a stove that will produce an appropriate amount of heat for the room. Stoves that burn too hot or not hot enough may cause creosote to form on the inside of your chimney or flue pipe, creating a severe fire hazard.

The flue-pipe for a wood stove must be constructed of black iron as galvanized steel becomes too brittle when heated to the temperatures that result from burning wood.

Your chimney must conform to Ontario's Building Code Standards and should be approved by Underwriters' Laboratories of Canada (ULC) or Warnock Hersey Professional Services Ltd. Chimneys or vents designed for connection to oil- or gas-burning appliances cannot be used with wood-burning ones because they produce hotter flue gases.

Masonry chimneys should have a well-anchored metal or tile flue pipe collar to connect it to the flue pipe.

When installing your stove, remember that it will take more floor space than its actual dimensions because of the clearances needed to ensure safety.

First of all, your stove cannot be farther than ten feet (3 m) away from the chimney. A minimum clearance of 48 inches (120 cm) is needed between your stove and combustible walls. In cases where the stove is equipped with shielding, the clearance can be 36 inches (90 cm). These clearances can be reduced by placing a heat shield on the wall, spaced out from the wall one inch

Dry wood is safe wood

(2.5 cm) by non-combustible spacers. The heat shield must not be closer than one inch (2.5 cm) to the floor and three inches (7.5 cm) from the ceiling to allow a vertical flow of air and must extend one foot (30 cm) beyond the top and edge of the stove.

All wood stoves must be mounted on a non-combustible floor pad — such as a sheet of steel — that extends 18 inches (45 cm) beyond any other side.

The flue pipe should be kept as short as possible with no more than two 90-degree bends. Its length must not exceed ten feet and must not pass through a combustible wall unless an 18-inch clearance is provided between the pipe and the combustible. Flue pipes cannot be installed closer than 18 inches to a wall or ceiling unless similar protection is provided as for stoves.

No matter how well you construct your stove installation, you can't have a fire without fuel — in this case, wood.

Soft woods burn faster and hotter than hard woods and make excellent kindling. Hard woods burn more slowly and don't require replacement as often as soft woods.

Wet wood, whether wet from the elements or because it is freshly cut or young, gives off water vapours that eventually result in the formation of creosote in your chimney or flue which could catch fire and thus pose serious consequences. Wet wood is also inefficient because the heat that should be used for heating your room is used up to dry the wood.

Therefore, it is important to air-dry wood for about a year to remove most of the natural moisture in the wood. The drier your wood, the less creosote buildup will result.

When operating your stove, the Fire Marshall advises to always keep your draft control partially open to allow enough air to enter the stove while the fuel is flaming, reducing creosote formation. Before placing new wood on the fire, open the draft controls to allow more combustion air to enter, thus ensuring rapid ignition and thus, efficiency.

To further increase efficiency, remove ashes from your stove, frequently have your chimney cleaned, monthly if used regularly. Keeping a clean chimney will result in increased safety as well as efficiency.

Also remember not to keep any boxes containing wood near the stove as sparks or heat may ignite them.

This information is intended only as a guide to using wood stoves. It is essential to follow all safety standards when constructing and using your stove. A permit from the municipality is required for chimney installations and all stoves must be installed according to the regulations contained in the Ontario Building Code and Fire Code (refer to the Canadian Standards Code CSA-B365, Installation Code for Solid Fuel Burning Appliances and Equipment.)

It is also important to follow the directions included with the parts of your system during installation.

To have your wood stove or coal stove inspected, contact your local fire department or municipal office.

Heat is a terrible thing to waste — especially on a cold night!

Be sure to check your smoke detector regularly

Installing new, efficient windows can pay back in as little as six years

WINDOWS have a magic quality. They not only enhance the exterior of a house, but also the interior. They let in the sunlight and offer a protected view of the world outside.

Unfortunately, some windows also let vast amounts of heat escape from the home. In fact, an average window can lose six to ten times as much heat as the same area of wall.

One of the biggest innovations in energy efficient windows is low-emissivity or low-E glass. This specially coated glass allows the sun's heat to enter a room, but ensures that heat inside the room is "reflected" back.

Properly installed energy efficient windows will not only save energy and money, but also make your home more comfortable. They come in a variety of styles and materials and the payback period on their installations can be as low as six years.

Consider energy efficiency when you're planning renovations

RENOVATION CAN do more than change the physical appearance of your house — it can improve the energy efficiency as well. By working energy efficiency into your plans, the money you save on fuel bills will help pay for the renovation work. Better yet, the energy savings will continue year after year.

Many energy conservation activities that normally would be extremely difficult or impossible can be undertaken during renovation. For example, effective sealing of the sill plate (a major source of air leakage) in a finished basement might involve removing the wall covering and insulation. This work can be accomplished more conveniently when you are actually finishing the basement.

A common reason for doing renovation work is to make the home more comfortable. Energy conservation can help. An energy-efficient home has fewer drafts and cold walls and is warmer in winter and cooler in summer than a poorly insulated, leaky home.

Energy efficiency can usually be incorporated into renovation plans at little extra cost. If you're hiring a contractor, ask to have energy improvements worked into the renovation proposal.

Here are some tips that will help you build energy efficiency into all of your home renovation plans:

• To start at the top: if you plan to turn attic space into an extra room, you can make it more comfortable by sealing all air leaks, installing generous amounts of insulation and adding an air-vapour barrier on the warm side of the insulation. If space is at a premium, board stock insulation covered by a suitable fire-resistant material (such as gypsum board) might be the best solution. Installing windows on the south-facing wall

Savings inside and out are possible when energy is part of your plans and skylights in the ceiling can both brighten the room and provide passive solar heat (be sure the windows and skylights are caulked and weather-stripped).

• If you are working on the ventilation system in an unfinished attic, check the existing insulation and air sealing; it may be worthwhile to upgrade both. Vents should be unobstructed by debris to improve air flow and help prevent condensation problems and ice buildup. If insulation is blocking the vents, create a clear air passage by installing baffles. Ensure that the joints around new vents are completely sealed and that the vents are louvered or installed to keep rain or snow from entering the attic.

• when decorating existing upstairs rooms, consider using oilbased paint or vinyl wallpaper. These materials can help prevent water vapour from passing into the wall cavity or attic, where it can decrease the effectiveness of the insulation.

• Double-glazed windows and insulated doors can significantly reduce conductive heat loss. Be sure that all doors and windows, old or new, are thoroughly caulked and weather-stripped. Caulk around doors and window trim with a paintable caulking before painting. If you replace a baseboard, caulk the joint between the wall and floor before installing the new material. Caulking should always be applied from inside the house.

• Traditional masonry fireplaces contribute to the appearance of a room but unless they have a heat transfer system, they are inherently inefficient. When making repairs to an existing fireplace, be sure the damper seals tightly or consider installing a chimney cap damper. Better yet, consider a fireplace insert or a factory built, zero clearance fireplace.

Supplementing the combustion air available to a fireplace can also reduce the amount of heated air drawn up the chimney. Fresh air intake ducts bring combustion air from the outdoors to the front of the fireplace. The ducts should be equipped with a tight-fitting damper that can be closed when the fireplace is not in use.

Glass doors can be an attractive addition to a fireplace and can help prevent house air from being lost up the chimney when the fire is dying down or when the fireplace is not in use. If you're installing a new fireplace, consult local retailer and contractors for advice on energy efficiency.

• Major kitchen renovations, such as the addition of new cupboards, also provide an opportunity for air sealing or insulation work. If you're adding a south-facing breakfast nook, consider incorporating energy-efficient windows in the design for a pleasant 'solarium-like' effect that takes advantage of passive solar heat.

• In the bathroom, do as much caulking and insulation work as possible (insulate on the cold side of the water pipes to prevent freezing). Many caulking materials are moisture resistant, making them ideal for the bathroom. Also, consider installing a flow restrictor showerhead to reduce the amount of hot water used.

• Before finishing the basement ceiling, tape all joints in the hot air ducts (you might even consider insulating long runs of duct work). This will help get more of the heat from the furnace to its destination. Caulk all cracks in the exterior masonry walls, install insulation and add an air-vapour barrier.

Energy efficiency also can be incorporated into renovation work on the outside of your house. For example, if you have gone to the trouble of excavating to repair leaky foundation walls, it makes sense to insulate these walls from the outside before backfilling. In any case, make sure the wall is damp- proofed.

Before re-siding your house, add insulation from the outside or use insulating sides. And if you're adding a pool or buying a new heating system for an existing pool, consider buying a solar water-heating system.

When Ken McKnight of Haliburton bought some seeds from the Minden Fruit Market, he wasn't sure what his garden would produce. This lime green vegetable has him stumped. It's three feet long and 15 pounds and he has no idea what it is, or whether he should be cooking it for dinner. If anyone can help him identify it, please give him a call.

Ruth Still

754-2602

I take up reporting the hamlet's activities again after a slow recovery from the usual weeks and months of visitors. Sandwiched in there was a trip to Scotland, the land of interminable rain, with a 16-year-old granddaughter.

On September 19, Eagle Lake Church served a roast beef dinner to 208 people. Aside from the benefit to the church coffers was the three generation, behind-the-scenes cooperation, which was most gratifying.

On Saturday, October 3, Eagle Lake Church celebrated the ordination of our now pastor, John Byelis. Officiating was Pastor Paul Benson and Rev. Lars Kleynhans, Area Minister.

It was an occasion of great rejoicing, by family, friends, and congregation. John now becomes full-time pastor at Eagle Lake as Paul Benson assumes the same role at West Guilford Baptist Church on January 1, 1999.

The wedding of Lorraine Hutchinson and Keith Kneeshaw will be solemnized at Eagle Lake Community Church on Saturday, October 24, 1998 at 1:30 p.m. The community is welcomed to witness the ceremony and to join the couple at Birch Point Lodge, 7:00 to 9:30 for an evening of fun - music, crokinole and euchre.

Bill and Donna Medland of Eagle Lake, the originators of the Haliburton Silver Flutes, report that the band has been invited to play at the following Santa Claus parades: Toronto, Nov. 15; Newmarket/ Keswick, Nov. 21; Haliburton, Nov. 22; Minden, Nov. 28.

This group has had astonishing success since it was formed in 1994 – "Haliburton needed a band for its parades." The band now numbers over 30, and has devoted players, supported by enthusiastic parents, who donated funds to purchase the pants needed to complete the uniforms.

Coleraine, a community in northern Ireland, donated some of the more expensive instruments which the band now has.

New players are always needed as trained young people move on. Bill issues a special invitation to any adult with the interest but who needs to perfect the skill.

Instruction is at St. George's Church on Thursday, 7:00 - 8:30. Practice takes place at the J. D. Hodgson Elementary School on Monday and Tuesday, 3:30 to 4:30 – a much needed extra curricular activity at this time.

Home Support volunteers provide invaluable community support

Did you know that nearly one in 10 people in Ontario live alone, feel isolated, and are unable to cope with simple daily chores like preparing meals and house cleaning?

Haliburton County Home Support's volunteers are dedicated to a wide range of services which assist seniors and physically challenged persons to remain safely and comfortably in their homes and communities.

The purpose of Community Support Month '98 (October) is to raise awareness of the vital role community support services play in Ontario's health care system.

Last year, Haliburton County Home Support Services delivered 7,194 hot and/or frozen meals; maintained 81 emergency response units for those persons who required help for medical or security reasons; provided home help 695 times; provided home maintenance 23 times; transported individuals on 2,804 trips to medical appointments, essential shopping and outings that are vital to their mental and physical health; our volunteers carried out 454 friendly visits and called persons living alone 1,207 times to make sure they were coping; and provided 911 meals (through community-minded restaurant suppliers) to seniors and those physically challenged persons who wished to socialize outside the home, through wheels to meals.

Our services are proudly not-for-profit. This means that our organization reinvests revenue in service delivery, is accountable to its community and creates additional resources through volunteer involvement.

1999 is International Year of Older Persons.

If you wish more information about the services offered, or wish to volunteer, please call 457-2941 or 1-800-567-2941.

Thank you to the 128 volunteers of Haliburton County Home Support Services who make delivery of these services available.

712 CARDS OF THANKS

INGOLDSBY U.C.W. would like to thank everyone who supported the Soup and Sandwich Lunch and Harvest Table on October 3rd and 4th. It was a great weekend.

WE WISH to express our sincere gratitude, although slightly delayed, but no less appreciated, to all those whose kindness and caring assisted us during a painful period: The Haliburton District Access Centre for arranging necessary care and support in the home; the Red Cross and VON's for their daily visits; Pastor Brian Plouffe of Lakeside Baptist Church for his thoughtful, uplifting service; with a special thanks to Dwayne Lloyd and staff from Haliburton Community Funeral Home, whose compassion and caring, again, went beyond the necessary requirements. It's so convenient and helpful to have this service available within one's own community. A simple thank you to everyone concerned is not enough – but we will say it again. Thank you! Phebe's daughters, Dawn Shivas, Gail Scott and family.

712 CARDS OF THANKS

A SPECIAL "THANK YOU" to Wigamog Inn and Bonnie View Inn for their generous donations of weekends for two for our August 26th raffle. The winners were: Don Hall (Wigamog Inn) and Mark Morrow (Bonnie View). The winner of the queen size quilt was Faye McLeod. "Thanks" to all who purchased tickets.
